

A bank will always incur losses on a few of its loans. But as long as the bank lends responsibly, the losses across all loans will be small and predictable.